

Idaho State University
Counseling
Course Learning Outcomes

COUN 6611, Counseling Research and Statistics

1. Understand rationale underlying research questions
2. Have clarity on operational definitions established for the research constructs
3. Define and understand appropriateness of methodology in relation to research question
4. Learn appropriateness of different statistical analyses
5. Understand relationship between the conclusions and the results
6. Become familiar with implications of the research or theoretical literature
7. Design a research study / evaluate a counseling program
8. Develop a research question and hypothesis with rationale
9. Identify ethical issues in research and evaluation

COUN 6612, Psychological Testing for Counselors

1. Increase your breadth of knowledge about assessments in counseling.
2. Critically review assessments appropriate for use with clients in a variety of settings including academic, social, and mental health concerns.
3. Apply knowledge of counseling assessment to develop a set of recommendations for counselors to help determine most appropriate and effective assessments for use with a variety of clients.